Number Portability facility in the mobile telephone segment shortly in the country;

(b) if so, the details thereof;

(c) whether it is a fact that the mobile phone service providers are not enthusiastic about the plan as it involves heavy investment and diversion of funds earmarked for rural area penetration; and

(d) if so, the details thereof and Government's reaction thereto?

THE MINISTER OF STATE IN THE MINISTRY OF COMMUNICATIONS AND INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY (DR. SHAKEEL AHMAD): (a) and (b) Telecom Regulatory Authority of India (TRAI) has submitted its recommendations on "Mobile Number Portability" on 08-03-2006.

(c) and (d) These recommendations were finalized by TRAI through a consultation process. During Construction, some of the mobile operators had indicated that cost of implementation of Mobile Number Portability (MNP) would be very high and this is not appropriate time to introduce Mobile Number Portability because the operators are in the process of expansion of their network in rural areas. The TRAI's recommendations are under consideration.
